

Collection Account Management (CAM)

The CAM service ensures that any party who has a financial interest in a film (or television production), from financier to profit participant and from actor to producer, will receive its share of the revenues collected.

As soon as Fintage CAM becomes involved in a project, a collection account (bank account) is opened in which the worldwide revenues of the film must be paid.

The parties involved, but in any case producer, sales agent and Fintage, enter into a CAM agreement, which instructs the sales agent to have all revenues paid in the collection account and it instructs Fintage, which acts as a trusted third party, on the allocation and disbursement of those revenues.

The advantages are substantial

- Correct and timely disbursement of the entitlements to all parties and beneficiaries.
- Transparency through clear, concise and regular financial reports throughout the term of the agreement.
- An effective shield against the usual (economic) risks of the audiovisual industry.
- Payment of guild residuals can be entirely outsourced by the producer.

What is Fintage CAM's position?

Fintage CAM will receive, allocate and disburse the revenues to the parties and beneficiaries on the basis of the CAM Agreement with the parties.

Fintage CAM Live – 24/7 Online Information

CAM Live provides you with internet access to our CAM reporting system. The purpose of this online service is to give you a convenient and immediate way of online viewing of your collection statements and distribution agreements - thus keeping you informed about your entitlements and the financial position on each Film or TV production.

What information is available?

- Daily updates of Gross Receipts Reports, showing the Live status of payments received and outstanding amounts per distribution agreement per production.
- PDF files of all collection statements that have been issued for the productions you have with us, added and made available on the agreed reporting dates.
